KPISS is freeform internet radio, built and run by a thriving global community of live DJs.

Established in 2015, by indie promoter Canadian/New Yorker DJ Sheri Barclay, KPISS has streamed from from a shipping container, a Brooklyn pizza shop window and a sexy 70's RV. Now broadcast from the anonymous addresses of audio aesthetes across the map — KPISS showers listeners with sounds spanning the ironic to the iconic, seven days a week. The on-air selectors are the finest group of creative misfits, extreme crate diggers and sophisticated music nerds ever assembled. Tune in to chat live, uncover lost gems and discover future favorites. KPISS is the first and only internet radio station supporting artists and labels directly via Bandcamp. Ad-free, eclectic, uncompromising and forever weird. The AM radio of the internet: KPISS.FM —The Golden Stream.

Uh huh. Well, I was in jr. high when Bat Out Of Hell came out. It was the biggest record at the time. I had a music teacher named Mrs. Thistlewaite. She was this ancient grandma music teacher, but she was really into know what the kids were into so she would let us bring in our favorite records at the time. We used to call her Whistlelits, but I remember someone bringing that album in and listening to it front to back. Whistlelits loved that record! She talked about it endlessly after she heard it! She thought it was a masterpiece on the level of the classical masters!
